Farmland Investment Near Bengaluru: What to Know

Bengaluru's growth has pushed many buyers to look at farmland investment near Bengaluru as an alternative to city real estate, drawn by lower entry points, open space and long term appreciation potential.

What does farmland cost near Bengaluru?

Farmland pricing near Bengaluru varies widely by corridor, proximity to the city, road access, soil quality, water availability and how developed the surrounding area is, so figures from one belt rarely apply to another. Contact our team directly for current plot pricing at Landmark Vanasiri.

Is farmland a good investment near Bengaluru?

Rural land near a fast growing metropolitan region tends to benefit from rising infrastructure and logistics investment nearby, as is the case in Hosakote. As with any land purchase, buyers should verify title, survey documents and approvals before committing.

Can Non-Agriculturists Buy Farmland in Karnataka? 2026 Legal Update

Yes, in most cases. Under the original Karnataka Land Reforms Act, 1961, Sections 79A and 79B restricted the purchase of agricultural land to agriculturists and barred companies, trusts and institutions from holding it. The Karnataka Land Reforms (Amendment) Act, 2020, repealed these restrictions, so any Indian citizen can now purchase agricultural land in the state regardless of agricultural background, income or profession.

Two points are worth noting. Section 79B still restricts companies, co-operative societies, trusts and institutions from buying agricultural land, with limited exceptions. And the political picture is not fully settled, in 2024 the Karnataka Chief Minister announced an intention to review and potentially restore Sections 79A and 79B, though no such legislation had been enacted as of the most recent information available to us.

Given this, buyers should confirm the current legal position with a Karnataka registered advocate before purchase, rather than relying solely on this summary.

Content note: This section covers a live legal and political topic. Reverify the current status of Sections 79A and 79B before each publish or update cycle.
